American Society of Home Inspectors and InspectorPro Insurance Announces Premier Partnership to Advance Risk Management Education and Provide Better Claims Protection

(August 1, 2018) —Today, the American Society of Home Inspectors (ASHI) announced its Premier Partnership with InspectorPro Insurance to advance risk management education and provide better claims protection in the home inspection industry.

Through the Partnership, ASHI members will receive regular information regarding claims prevention, trends, and risk management techniques thus enabling ASHI home inspectors to better protect themselves from potential demands. Further, the availability of InspectorPro's pre-claims assistance, errors and omissions, and general liability programs will allow ASHI members to gain access to insurance and legal resources essential to safeguarding their home inspection businesses.

"For a decade, we've loved and served ASHI home inspectors. Their integrity, knowledge, and industriousness sets them apart from others in the field," said Ryan Osborne, Program Director of InspectorPro Insurance. "We are excited to serve ASHI members at a greater capacity so that they can have more peace of mind and confidence at every inspection."

Risk management needs are growing in the home inspection industry as the nation continues a culture of litigiousness. Such a culture requires that inspection professionals have accurate information and applicable skills to protect themselves from unwarranted complaints. Inspectors also require insurance policies that can meet their coverage needs and handle claims appropriately. Hence, the ASHI and InspectorPro Partnership allows for a streamlined distribution of claims prevention education and claims protection.

Educational content from InspectorPro will begin appearing in the ASHI Reporter in August 2018. Insurance policies, including pre-claims assistance, will be available to ASHI members for purchase from InspectorPro at www.homeinspector.org/insurance in the coming months.
